THE NECS 2017 CONFERENCE
PARIS 29 JUNE – 1 JULY 2017
UNIVERSITÉ SORBONNE NOUVELLE - PARIS 3

Sensibility & the Senses
Media Bodies Practices
Dear 2017 NECS Conference delegates,

A very warm welcome to the 11th NECS Conference, which will take place in one of the most glorious and celebrated film and media hubs in the world: Paris! The Conference will be hosted by the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3 in cooperation with the Centre Pompidou and with the Université Paris Diderot – Paris 7, which will host the Pre-Conference activities.

The past years saw our network of peers significantly growing, but also dealing with major, dramatic concerns. The rise of a new autocratic power in places we believed to be a safe harbor for critical thinking is putting at serious risk the circulation of knowledge, awareness, and experience. Growing populism throughout Europe often looks down to institutions, teaching, and research as endeavors preventing a more immediate, outspoken expression of ‘the people’. These phenomena affect public discourse, and sometimes determine the shrinking of academic funding: restraints in circulation, and disempowerment of scholars and critical thinking are among their collateral effects. Global terrorism drives nations and societies apparently afar one from another. And yet, it also unites individuals and communities, unwilling to bow their head to totalizing ideologies. Many European countries put their shoulder to the wheel, refused to speak the language of hatred and exclusion, and fostered a discourse of unity, respect, and inclusion. France, and notably Paris, are at the spearhead of such choice.

In recent times, it is more important than ever to maintain the spirit of unity and exchange at the core of the European moral, social, and political project. The NECS Conference has developed into a professional landmark of the discipline of cinema and media studies and an inspirational moment in the academic calendar to meet international colleagues, exchange ideas, debate hot topics, create networks, and make friends. We also firmly believe that this event and NECS itself are inclusive initiatives, aimed at promoting mutual exchange and the sharing of knowledge. For all of these reasons, Paris is a perfect location to organize our annual meeting, maybe the best place to reaffirm that rational and critical thinking should not surrender.

We are truly thankful to the local organising committee – for the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle Paris 3, Raphaëlle Moine and Antonio Somaini, together with Alexis Blanchet, Fabrice Buschini, Teresa Castro, Kristian Feigelson, Kira Kitsopanidou, Barbara Laborde, Bruno Péquignot, and Antoine Prévost-Balga; for the Université Paris Diderot Paris 7, Emmanuelle André and Martine Beugnet, together with Jeanne Ferrier, Carlos Kong, Halbe Kuipers, and Sarah Ohana – for the outstanding work they have done in planning and organising this year’s Conference and Pre-Conference. We appreciate their incredible dedication and organisational talent, which have brought us all together here in Paris! We would also like to thank the directors of the two collections of the Centre Pompidou – the collection “Film” (Philippe-Alain Michaud with Jonathan Pouthier) and the collection “Nouveaux Médias” (Marcella Lista with Étienne Sandrin) – who made it possible to host three of the four keynote presentations in the Cinéma 1 and Cinéma 2 of the Centre Pompidou.

This year’s Conference is entitled Sensibility and the Senses: Media, Bodies, Practices. We think that this topic opens much room for an intense and thought-provoking discussion among the participants. Sensorial experience and the transformation of the senses and related sensibility across time and through media is a perfect bridge among our members, their different backgrounds, and their research perspectives. By embodying into a broad theme a wide range of concerns and endeavors, the conference also refers to our association as a body made of different, interwoven and interacting parts. Sensibility and the Senses triggers historical research on variations affecting our senses and their development, as much as a huge body of theoretical work, summoning up diverse disciplines, from the humanities all the way to the hard sciences, in the attempt to understand in what way media mould, reproduce, and disemboby our sensorial experience. However, by locating the question of the senses at the core of our reflection, this year’s topic also hints at the human body and its experience as the reference point for further elaboration. Bodies live the media experience, shape it according to human perception and sensibility, and become interconnected through it. Furthermore, human bodies imagine other experiences – animal, material, elemental – through media. They figure out their otherness. Finally, utopias of the expansion of sensorial experience through media frequently recur throughout their history, as a way to unmoor individuals from limited existence, and discover worlds, beings, and spaces beyond their boundaries.
We are very happy to announce four distinguished keynote speakers who will share their insights with us in the plenary meetings on the evening of the Pre-Conference, and during the three ensuing afternoons and evenings of the Conference. All the keynote lectures will take place in two of the most iconic places in Paris: the Centre Georges Pompidou and the Grand Amphithéâtre de la Sorbonne. We are thrilled to welcome among us renowned and inspiring artists such as Lewis Klahr and Elizabeth Price, and esteemed scholars such as Deborah Chambers (Newcastle University) and Mark Hansen (Duke University).

After last year’s positive reactions, there will be several workshops during the second day of the Pre-Conference (Wednesday, June 28th): they will be entitled, respectively, “The Impact of Digitalization on Global Screen Industries,” “How to Teach European Cinema: The European Universities Film Award (EUFA),” and “Experimental Media Archaeology.” They are all meant to prompt discussions on the challenges related to research on media industries and media archaeology, and on the ways to share the European cinema legacy, tightening the bonds within our membership and among different generations. Furthermore, we are very happy that a Graduate Workshop (entitled Future Sensibilities: Mediations of Precarious Life) is taking place again this year during the two days of the Pre-Conference, and also offers a keynote address by filmmaker and theorist Richard Misek. We warmly welcome this great initiative of our younger members.

The open-access journal NECSUS: European Journal of Media Studies has just gone online with its eleventh issue (http://www.necsus-ejms.org/), and its broad international following consistently grows. The Editorial Board is constantly seeking new contributions: it is looking forward to your proposals!

This year’s Conference is also a momentous one: after the first ten years, NECS is turning into a solidified, consistent, attractive initiative. Our association and Conference turned big! This appears reassuring and rewarding to us, and we all ought to be proud of the great endeavor we supported and made true during the past few years. This also meant an enormous amount of work, particularly this year, when the 750 proposals that we received after the publication of the call for papers contributed to make the 2017 NECS Conference the biggest NECS Conference ever. We are persuaded that the five days of the Pre-Conference and Conference will be a thought-provoking, inspiring, unique platform to move forward, with our minds and our sensibility, towards the future of media studies.

We welcome you all to the General Meeting during which we will discuss the NECS events of the past year as well as our future plans. Please do take part and have your say!

We are very much looking forward to seeing you at one of the many events this Conference has to offer, and we wish you an inspiring, engaging and enjoyable time in Paris!

Dear 2017 NECS Conference delegates,

Welcome to the 11th annual NECS Conference, which will take place from June 29th to July 1st 2017 in Paris. The Conference will be hosted by the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3 in cooperation with the Centre Pompidou and the Université Paris Diderot – Paris 7, which will host the Pre-Conference activities on June 27th and 28th.

We would like to thank for their generous support the European Network for Cinema and Media Studies (NECS), the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle – Paris 3 and its UFR Arts & Médias, the collections “Film” and “Nouveaux Médias” of the Centre Pompidou, the CNC (Centre National du Cinéma et de l’Image Animée), the LabEx ICCA (Industries Culturelles & Création Artistique), and the Université Paris Diderot – Paris 7 together with UDPN (Usages des Patrimoines Numérisés) and the research units LARCA and CERILAC.

We would also like to thank Deborah Chambers, Mark Hansen, Lewis Klahr, and Elizabeth Price for having accepted our invitation as keynote speakers.

We look forward to a very exciting program of panels and workshops, and we remind you that the NECS Conference activities (June 29th – July 1st) will take place this year in three different locations throughout the city of Paris:

- the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle – Paris 3 (which will be the main Conference site, where all the parallel sessions with the different panels will take place)
- the Centre Pompidou (for the Opening Remarks and the Keynote presentations #1 and #3 on June 29th and July 1st)
- the Sorbonne (for the Keynote presentation #2 on June 30th, the round table organized by the CNC – Centre National du Cinéma et de l’Image Animée, the NECS General Meeting, and a Cocktail open to all conference participants).

The Pre-Conference activities (June 27th-28th) will take place in two different locations:

- the Université Paris Diderot – Paris 7 (for the NECS Graduate Workshop and the three Pre-Conference Workshops)
- the Centre Pompidou (for the Pre-Conference Keynote on June 28th)

Please remember that both registration as a NECS member (http://necs.org/user/register) and the registration for the conference (https://necs.org/conference/registration/) are obligatory for everyone, even if you only attend as listener. Please keep in mind that your annual payment to NECS includes the conference fee. Therefore you need to pay the 2017 NECS membership before June 15th, 2017. It is not possible to pay on location, and without registration you will not get access to the conference.

We look forward to seeing you in Paris!

Sincerely,

NECS General Meeting Grand Amphithéâtre Sorbonne
How do film and media practices sense and make sense of the future when it presents life as increasingly precarious? From the passage into the Anthropocene, the exhaustion of natural resources and the technologization of labor, widespread right-wing populism, to crises of refugee movement and expansive relations of inequality, contemporary futures present themselves as risks for life. Recent theorizations of precarious life (Butler, 2009, 2015; Lorey, 2015; Agamben, 2016) maintain that the future can no longer assume to be a stable temporality or even a tangible potentiality. What futures can still be imagined? A concern for shared futures must rather be sensed, described, politicized, and continuously reinvented. The destabilizing historical present urges us to reconsider how film and media cultures have historically, and continue to, make sense of coming futures and sense possible alternatives. What can be found in the aesthetics, techniques, operations, and modes of thinking and speculation that sense, create, and invent new futures? Asking if, and how, the future is still sensible, this workshop aims at examining the aesthetic, social, ecological and political dimensions of historical and contemporary film, visual and media cultures and their methodologies.

Alongside the familiar scholarly article, the video essay has become a key alternative mode of analysing films and theorizing about cinema. It has also proved to be a precious pedagogical tool. Film-maker, editor, and theorist Richard Misek has curated a series for a special issue of (In) Transition: Journal of Videographic Film and Moving Image Study, an international, peer-reviewed online journal that focuses on the video essay form. He will give a brief presentation and Q&A on the video essay, before screening a sample of the videos included in the forthcoming special issue.

Drinks and snacks will be served.

In 2016, Filmfest Hamburg and the European Film Academy (EFA) launched the 1st European University Film Award (EUFA). This award, presented and voted for by European University students, aims to engage young people with the values of European cinema and processes for its recognition and promotion. Five films were viewed and discussed in the participating university classes. One student representative per university came to Hamburg for a deliberation meeting. For two days students discussed all films together, exchanged arguments and voted for the final winner: Daniel Blake by Ken Loach. NECS helped connect film scholars and students from 13 European countries with the EUFA program in 2016 and facilitates the expansion of the project. This workshop will bring together the award’s initiator, Filmfest Hamburg programmer Kathrin Kohlstedde, and scholars who participated in teaching the first EUFA classes. In this workshop we will discuss the different approaches and challenges that arose by teaching current European cinema in different settings depending on the course setup, the program, department and country. While discussing this specific initiative, we will also consider broader issues such as current teaching methods for film analysis and criticism, connections of theory and practice sections as well as transnational and cosmopolitan approaches to European cinema.

Workshop organizer: Skadi Loist (University of Rostock)

Participants
1) Kathrin Kohlstedde (Filmfest Hamburg)
2) Lydia Papadimitriou (Liverpool John Moores University)
3) Francesco Pitassio (Università degli Studi di Udine)

American filmmaker Lewis Klahr has been collecting images and sounds since the late 1970s, investigating their historical, mnemonic as well as aesthetic potential. Like a distant echo of André Breton’s question – “why should I not grant to dreams what I occasionally refuse reality, that is, the value of certainty in itself” – Klahr’s work explores the twists and turns of the unconscious, where existentialist quest, melancholia and popular iconography mingle. At the crossroads between surrealist collage and bygone Hollywood classicism, his feature film Sixty Six (2002-2015) offers itself as an immersion in the pop universe of the 1960s which the artist translates into a mythological tale. The projection will be followed by a conversation between Lewis Klahr, Emmanuelle André and Martine Beugnet (both Université Paris Diderot – Paris 7).

Born in 1956, Lewis Klahr lives and teaches in Los Angeles. He studied at SUNY Purchase College (New York) and at the University of Buffalo, where the discovery of the films of Stan Vanderbeek, Harry Smith, Bruce Conner, and Joseph Cornell proved decisive for the development of his own work. In 1977, Lewis Klahr started to create 8mm and 16mm animated collages. In 2007 he began to experiment with digital filmmaking. His films draw on mythological imagery, American cinema, Pop Art, comics, and photo novels, breaking away from the archetypical codes of representation. His work has been widely shown and features in international collections including the MoMA’s. It has garnered prestigious awards such as the Wexner Center for the Art (2010) and the Brakhage Vision Award (2013). This event is organized as part of the «Technological Uncanny» project funded by UDPN (Usages des Patrimoines Numérisés), the LARCA and the CERILAC, and headed by Emmanuelle André, Martine Beugnet (Université Paris Diderot - Paris 7), Nicole Vincent and Camille Kurtz (Université Paris Descartes - Paris 5).
World, Earth, Flesh, Sense: From Intersubjectivity to Intrasensibility

The talk will explore recent efforts to “move beyond the human scale” with the aim of specifying the role played by technics in “cosmic solidarity” (Whitehead). It will examine various theories and approaches to cosmic solidarity, including Derrida’s “stabilizing apparatus,” Jeffrey Nealon’s “plant theory,” and Vicki Kirby’s “quantum anthropology,” all of which raise compelling and crucial objections to human scale approaches like phenomenology and seek to expand the terrain for contact with the nonhuman in ways that avoid anthropocentric retrenchments. By exposing the limitations of each of these intertwined ventures, while also embracing aspects of each, it shall set the stage for a technical phenomenology of sensibility rooted in quantum measurement as it informs the final work of Merleau-Ponty and its development in the information-induced operation of individuation theorized by Merleau-Ponty’s student, Gilbert Simondon. Understood as the generator of phenomena across all scales, technical measurement affords an opportunity to encompass human and nonhuman sensibility within larger individuations. Phenomenality becomes decoupled from its privileged affinity with human intentionality and is redistributed within individuations that involve but do not necessarily center around human activities and that cannot be conceptualized as manifestations of restricted cognitive processes.

This technical phenomenology of sensibility informs scale-variant theory in two distinct, yet closely intertwined directions: on one hand, it brokers contact across scale divides, in the “outward” direction of scales both larger and smaller than human ones; on the other, it moves in an “inward” direction, via the scalar complexity (or scalar multiplicity) of the contemporary technical ensembles that dictate the operationality of contemporary global culture (Bratton’s “Stack”). In other words, a processual approach that centers around information-induced individuation places the human within complex textures of sensibility, at scales both consonant and dissonant with human phenomenality. What results is nothing less than a generalized aesthetics of phenomenality.

Mediated and Simulated Intimacies:
The Entrance of Algorithms, Robotics, and Smart Technologies into Personal Life

What roles are new technologies playing within changing notions and practices of intimacy? This presentation examines the processes through which personal connections are performed, displayed and re-conceived in the digital era. The entrance of algorithms, robotics and smart technology into spheres of intimacy are addressed to enquire into ways emotions and personal relationships are imagined and narrativized in popular culture. While ‘simulated intelligence’ goes almost unquestioned in everyday discourses about robotics, ‘simulated intimacy’ remains deeply perplexing. To cast light on the nature of today’s mediated intimacy, the talk will address dilemmas of mediated intimacy relating to trust, privacy and authenticity. Two aspects of mediated and ‘machine’ intimacy will be explored: ‘public intimacy’ associated with social media, and ‘automated intimacy’ narrativized through interactions with humanoid robots. These discourses represent points of tension surrounding changing personal relationships. The talk will discuss whether they signify a crisis of intimacy or sociable creativity in the digital age.

Deborah Chambers is Professor of Media and Cultural Studies at Newcastle University. Intersecting media and cultural studies and sociology, her research areas include networked intimacy and changing social ties; media and popular cultures; the meaning of home; changing media technologies and households; women and journalism. Her books include Changing Media, Homes and Households: Cultures, Technologies and Meanings (2016); Social Media and Personal Relationships: Online Intimacies and Networked Friendship (2013); A Sociology of Family Life: Change and Diversity in Intimate Relations (Polity 2012); New Social Ties: Contemporary Connections in a Fragmented Society (Palgrave Macmillan 2006), Women and Journalism (Chambers, Steiner and Fleming Routledge 2004); Representing the Family (Sage 2001)

LECTURE

London-based artist Elizabeth Price (British, b. 1966) creates richly multi-layered narrative moving image works made specifically for gallery environments. Often beginning with research undertaken in archives and museum collections, Price draws on varying references, such as architectural sites, social and political histories, as well as and the language of advertising copy. Composed of collaged imagery – analogue and digital photography, animation, and motion graphics – Price’s works almost always include scrolling text, sometimes read out loud by a narrator’s computerized voice set against a musical background. Through the artist’s choice of composition, archival footage is brought into conversation with digitally rendered imagery, blurring the boundary between historical fact and fiction, real and imagined narratives. Editing plays a key role in Price’s practice, and her arresting works are widely regarded for the interplay of the visual and aural – the rapid succession of imagery combined with layered soundtracks.

In 2012 Price was awarded the Turner Prize for her solo exhibition ‘HERE’ at the Baltic Centre for Contemporary Art, Gateshead. The same year she also won the Paul Hamlin Award for artists. In 2013 she was awarded the Contemporary Art Society Annual Award, a commission prize which enabled her to make a work for the collection of the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. She was featured in the British Art Show 2011, and has since had solo presentations at Bloomberg International and Chisenhale Gallery London; The New Museum, New York; Julia Stoschek Collection, Düsseldorf; The Swedish Contemporary Art Foundation, Stockholm; Kunsthalle Winterthur, Switzerland, the Musée d’art Contemporain de Montréal and the Neuer Berliner Kunstverien, Berlin. Forthcoming she will be presenting solo exhibitions at ISAW, New York and the Chicago Institute of Art in 2017; The Walker Art Center, Minneapolis; Nottingham Contemporary; Berlin Natural History Museum in 2018 and at the Whitworth Manchester in 2019.

From Cinema to Immersive Digital Experience: 70 Years of Innovation in French Public Policies

France’s public policies in the film and audiovisual industries have inspired and continue to inspire many countries around the world. Sometimes criticized as protectionist, these policies introduced after World War II led France to become the first European hub in the field of film production and exportation. The round table will discuss the ambitious and innovative approach taken by the CNC (Centre National du Cinéma et de l’Image Animée) to sustain the French film, audiovisual and new media industry. From movies to video games and from web series to the immersive medium of virtual reality, the French public support system plays a key role in boosting creativity and innovation in the filmmaking and new media industries. How have content creators been embracing these new opportunities?

Moderator: Laurent Creton (President of the Conseil Académique and Vice-President of the Commission de la Recherche at the Université Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3).

CNC Representative: Pierre-Emmanuel Lecerf (Directeur Financier et Juridique, Directeur des Affaires Européennes et Internationales)

The question of the relationship between media, bodies, and the senses cuts across the entire history of media theories. Since their first appearance, technical media such as telegraphy, photography, gramophone, film, typewriter, the telephone, radio, and then television, computer, internet, as well as a wide variety of cultural techniques for the recording, processing, and transmitting of information have been analyzed taking into consideration their relationships with the human body and its sensory organs. Concepts such as “organ projection,” “prosthesis,” “innervation,” “extension,” and “interface” have been used to describe the contact and the interaction between human organisms and technical apparatuses with their various degrees of hybridization, which in turn have generated a whole series of utopian and dystopian visions of a future “post-human” condition. And while the very notion of “medium” is strictly related to the problem of sensory perception (since it finds one of its origins in the Latin translation of a Greek term, metaxu, which was used by Aristotle in order to indicate the material intermediary entities that make perception possible), the body itself (with its expressive face, its sensitive skin, and its meaningful gestures and movements) has often been considered a sort of primary medium, a crucial reference point in order to understand the very nature of mediation.

The current transformations in our media landscape raise once more the question of the correlation between the history of technology and the history of the human sensorium, and invite us to reconsider the various possible relationships between media – in the widest sense of the term – and the realm of the senses, affects, and emotions. Cinema, with the various historical transformations of its spatial dispositif, has provided for decades and continues to provide a particularly important field for the interpretation of the cultural dynamics involved in the representation and reception of bodily identities and for the analysis of the aesthetic, embodied experience of the spectator. The same can be said for other visual, audiovisual, and sound media, which have tried to render through the grains, textures, and frequencies of their representations the different, dynamic materialities of bodies and sensations.

Today, the new bio-technical forms of life produced by ubiquitous digital media and by a whole range of artistic and non-artistic practices confront us with unprecedented theoretical questions, which can be tackled by combining perspectives that are both archaeological and forward-looking. We need appropriate theoretical frameworks in order to understand phenomena such as the sensory and cognitive functions performed by contemporary networked screens, the return of stereoscopic 3D imagery, the recent developments in the fields of virtual and augmented reality, the increasing presence in our living environment of intelligent sensing devices, the agencies of elemental media and mediating matters, as well as our daily interactions with digital technologies whose computational processes and outcomes are located below or beyond the thresholds of human perception. Understanding the new conditions of human and non-human sensibility within a fully networked media environment is one of the major challenges of contemporary film and media studies.

Feel free to visit the stands of renowned publishers, presenting their current books and journals in the field of Film and Media Studies. The Publishers’ Forum is located in the rooms D16, D17, and D19 of the main conference venue (D Building, Université Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3) and is open throughout the entire conference.

List of the publisher stands in alphabetic order

Organizer: Teresa Castro (Université Sorbonne Nouvelle - Paris 3)
GENERAL INFORMATION

ENTRY FORMALITIES
It is highly recommended to bring some form of identification, especially when arriving by plane. UK nationals with a passport endorsed British Citizen do not require a visa and must have a passport valid on arrival. If their passport is endorsed British National (Overseas), British Overseas Territories Citizen or British Subject with the right of abode in the UK a visa is not required for a stay of up to 90 days; passports for these endorsements must be valid for three months beyond intended departure, with the exception of British Subjects, who need a passport valid on arrival. Other passport holders require a visa and three months validity on their passports. Non-European citizens traveling to the Schengen Area need to apply for a short-term Schengen visa under “tourist” specification. The borderless region known as the Schengen area includes the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain and Sweden. All these countries issue a standard Schengen visa that allows the holder to travel freely within the borders with a valid identity card or passport. A passport valid for at least three months after period of intended stay is needed for those who require a visa. Generally, visa exempt nationals must have a passport valid for period of intended stay (other than EEA nationals).

CURRENCY
France is part of the Euro (€) zone. It is also possible to use credit cards to cover the day-to-day expenses, usually without additional fees. It is recommended, however, to make cash withdrawal as smaller shops and public transit occasionally will not accept credit cards or electronic payment.

TIME ZONE
France is in the Central European Time Zone. Central European Standard Time (CET) is 1 hour ahead of Greenwich Mean Time (GMT+1). Like most states in Europe, Summer (Daylight-Saving) Time is observed in France, where the time is shifted forward by 1 hour; 2 hours ahead of Greenwich Mean Time (GMT+2. Note: this does not affect the 1 hour time difference to London, which changes to BST in summer).

TELEPHONE
Country code: +33
International code prefix: 00
Trunk prefix: NONE
To call French telephone numbers from outside France, either from a landline or a mobile phone, you will need to add the international dialing code, which is 0033 (or +33), followed by the telephone number you require (excluding the regular first 0 of French numbers, however). To make calls within France, dial the number you require without adding the international country dialing code. Before travelling to France you should contact your telephone service provider to activate the international roaming service (if it is not already activated automatically), otherwise especially Northern American travelers might not be able to phone or receive calls.
INTERNET
Conference participants will be able to access the internet through the eduroam network. This said, we strongly advice participants not to rely on a Wi-Fi connection for their presentation: loading the presentation one a USB stick is a safer solution. There are numerous Internet points and cafés offering Internet access. In many hotels (especially higher-category ones) a direct Internet connection is provided in the rooms. In addition, in France you will find Wi-Fi access available in many airports, hotels, train stations, and other public places where travelers pass through or stop off.

TECHNICAL INFORMATION
The voltage in France is 230 V which is the same voltage used in France and the United Kingdom. The plugs used in France are C or E. Plugs/sockets are usually an issue when it comes to traveling, so always make sure you travel with a universal plug adapter. France uses DVD Region 2. DVD Region 2 is used in Europe, the Middle East, and Japan. Note that a region 2 DVD cannot play on a DVD player supporting another region. There are, however, some region free DVD players available that can be used to overcome this. France uses Blu-ray Region B. Blu-ray Region B is used across Europe, the Middle East, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

INSURANCE
The organizers do not accept responsibility for individual medical, travel or personal insurance. All participants are strongly advised to take out their own personal insurance before travelling to the conference. Hospitals and doctors in France are obliged to treat you regardless of your health insurance status, so review your health insurance plan to determine what medical services it would cover during your trip. Especially Non-European nationals will need to pay – although usually a reasonable sum – for any health services.

LOCAL TRANSPORT
METRO & TRAIN
Paris has an excellent underground train system. There are 16 lines (lignes) (1-14, 3bis and 7bis) on which trains travel all day at intervals of a few minutes between 5 AM and 1:30AM (Saturday night/Sunday morning: 02:30), stopping at all stations on the line. Scheduled times for first and last trains are posted in each station on the center sign. In addition, there are 5 train lines called RER A, B, C, D, E. RER trains run at intervals of about 6 – 7 minutes, and stop at every station within Paris.
A basic ticket (Ticket t+) costs 1,90 €, valid only for one trip, on the RATP network. Changes are allowed with the same ticket. Return travel is not permitted with the same ticket. Books of 10 tickets are also available (14.50 €, valid for use on underground, bus, tram and RER in Paris services).
This ticket is necessary to both enter and exit the RER networks, as the RER trains travel on to the Parisian suburbs, outside the zone where a regular subway ticket can be used. Beware that travelling outside the city center without a valid RER ticket will get you fined. In particular, CDG airport is not within the city, and you’ll need to purchase a more expensive RER ticket to get there.
For travel outside of the Paris zone, the train arrival times are shown on a monitor hanging from the ceiling inside the RER station above the platform. Information about the stops to be made by the next train is presented on a separate board also hanging from the ceiling. It is important to check this board before boarding the train, as not all trains make stops at all stations on a given line.
BUS
The buses are very tourist-friendly, and they use the same fare-reducing passes as the Metro. Visit www.ratp.fr for more transportation information and to choose a reduced fare package.

TAXI
Many taxi cab companies run in Paris. Prices are established by a prefectoral bylaw and depend on the distance, the time of the day, the number of passengers etc.

Taxi G7 company: 36 07
Les taxis Bleus company: 36 09

Taxi stations are usually near train stations, big hotels, hospitals or large crossings. As in many other cities, a taxi can be difficult to stop; you may have to try several times. There is a €5.50 minimum on all taxi rides, mandated by city law. There is an extra charge for baggage handling. If for any reason you wish to file a complaint about a Paris taxi, take note of the taxi’s number on the sticker on the left hand backseat window.

BIKE
A bike rental service runs over the city of Paris: Vélib’ (http://velib.paris.fr / (english) http://en.velib.paris.fr). Stations can be found within 200m of many points of the city. The bicycles can be returned to any other station. Rentals can last from less than 30 minutes up to 24 hours. In each station, a vending machine (credit card only) allows to get subscription tickets. Short run subscription ticket costs 1,70 € for a period of 24 hours. Then, the following rates apply: first 30 minutes for free, from 30 minutes up to 1 hour: 1€, from 1h up to 1h30: 2€, then 4€ for each 30 minutes.
